August Muse:

August 3, 2014

Dear G.O.T. Devotee:

Summer is blasting by, and by that I mean both in speed and temperature. Along with this, I've noticed all the fun people have during the summer playing like children. Dancing, sunning & funning, laughter along with lots of love and affection going around.

To pay tribute to the essence of what my sense of summer has been this year, I present to you my muse for the month of August; Ixacao, the Mayan goddess of chocolate. You will taste a milk chocolate with graham cracker bits and whipped white chocolate ganache, enrobed in dark chocolate and adorned with graham cracker crumbs.

This s'mores inspired truffle is the totem reminiscent of being a kid. Thinking about the near ceremonial tradition takes me right back to a hologram of childhood. Can you feel the heat rolling off the flames of the fire pit or hear the chatter from the group of people who've gathered together to perform this ritual of joy that is roasting s'mores! What a great excuse to be outside with friends and family sharing love, laughter & chocolate treats!

Flash-forward to today. Why start a fire and add to the heat? Just get G.O.T. at the Haven or place an order for your Ixacao and enjoy in the cool comfort of the great indoors!

Q&A:

When will the Sanctum club be available?

This is a great question!

I receive this from time to time, and I often ask it of

Ixacao (Mayan goddess of chocolate)*

Milk chocolate with graham cracker bits & whipped white chocolate ganache/enrobed in dark chocolate/adorned with graham cracker crumbs.

Use all your senses to see, hear, taste and smell.*

What is the vibe you perceive? Where does your Kairos moment take you?

- Due to their perishable nature, store your truffles in cool, dry & airtight conditions.
- Consume within two weeks of purchase or freeze! To thaw: refrigerate overnight.
- Remove from chiller 5 minutes prior to serving.

myself. The honest answer is: as soon as I have divine intervention. (Why does admitting that make me think my business professors are cringing?)

For those who read this and know me personally, you have no doubt about the passion and perseverance it has taken and continues to take for me to accomplish this endeavor that is being the Goddess of Truffles. Others who have gotten to know G.O.T. first and are loyal fans (thank you) it may seem surprising to find out how much of a boutique operation I am.

That's right, it's just me! From fantasy scripting newsletter to orgasmic truffle tasting Kairos moments (I didn't make up that adjective. My truffles have literally been described as such!) it's yours truly - moi. Along with my blessed character-building impairments.

So while I'd love to, and will, offer a membership it will take some time, money & help. I am happy to ship for those not concerned with absorbing the packaging cost. Otherwise, you can always get your fix at the Haven Coffee House in Lexington.

Or if you live locally, place an order or book a personal tasting party!

*Truly,
Lila D.
